RESPONSE ARRANGEMENTS

The government departments responsible for controlling marine pollution and dealing with accidental spills from ships are the Gambia Port Authority, the The National Environment Agency and the Gambian Navy.

No national contingency plan exists. However, the International Maritime Organisation is in the process of assisting with a draft plan for the country. The major ports have local contingency plans in place.

RESPONSE POLICY

No official spill response policy exists. However, any response would involve manual clean-up of the many long sandy beaches which are an important tourist attraction.

Under local law the dumping of hazardous, toxic, or radio active substances into Gambian waters is prohibited. In addition, failure to remove any produced oily waste may lead to the imposition of fines.

EQUIPMENT

Government & Private

Limited stocks of boom and dispersant are held by the major ports. Any response would rely on public works and port equipment and agricultural equipment, and manual shoreline clean-up.

PREVIOUS SPILL EXPERIENCE

There do not appear to have been any major spills. However, oil/tar balls are regularly washed onto beaches.
