

Oil recovery using Danish vessels. The high viscosity of the oil has meant that mechanical grabs rather than skimmers were used.

Local community representatives volunteer their weekend to clean the amenity beach at Klintholm Havn

Workers maneuvered boom in remote areas.

Oil was stranded in marsh areas along the coastline of the island of Møn.

An old sugar processing facility in Stege was used to store oil waste.

Remote areas of coastline made mechanical recovery of oil difficult.